Dr. Judith Palfrey is the T. Berry Brazelton Professor of Pediatrics at Harvard Medical School and a Senior Associate in Medicine at Children's Hospital, Boston. From 1986 to 2008, she served as the Chief of the Division of General Pediatrics at Children's Hospital. She is a Past President of the American Academy of Pediatrics and in her role in the AAP, has helped to promote gun safety interventions.

Judith Palfrey has focused her career on designing and evaluating programs for children in response to the need to address the social determinants of child health. Dr. Palfrey believes that “advocacy” should be a component of the work that child health professionals engage in and has worked to develop teaching programs and tools that assist children's health care providers advocating for children.
