Kevin Lynch is formerly incarcerated. Since returning to his community in Worcester, he has been a tireless advocate for addiction recovery, violence prevention, and criminal justice reform. He serves as Executive Director of EPOCA (Ex Prisoners Organized for Community Advancement) and is a steering committee member for Jobs Not Jails. He has also consulted for Mass Inc as well as the Council of State Government on the topic of criminal justice reform. He is an advocate of the Resolve to Stop the Violence Project because he believes that violence is learned and can be unlearned.
